Hereford Cathedral School

Hereford Cathedral School is one of the UK's oldest schools, most likely dating back to 676AD when the Diocese of Hereford was founded. This would make it the sixth oldest school in the country originating as a song school attached to the Cathedral. The education of the Cathedral choristers has continued unbroken to this day.

Academic excellence means that every pupil achieves their greatest potential. Qualifications provide the passport for the next phase of a young person's education or employment, and our GCSE and A-Level outcomes are exceptional. Relatedly, our Sixth Formers leave to take up places at some of the world's leading universities, including Oxford, Cambridge, Imperial, UCL, LSE and King's College London, as well as institutions overseas, particularly in Canada and the USA. Additionally, students take up places on highly competitive degree apprenticeships, while others still become entrepreneurs. Our vision is for every pupil to be ambitious and aspirational in their approach to life beyond HCS and to thrive in the next phase of their education or employment.

Our approach is underpinned by a true studio-based culture, where all students are encouraged to immerse themselves in their creative practice, feed their imagination and build a dynamic portfolio of interdisciplinary skills that will open up an exciting and fulfilling future for them. This is consistently reflected in National Student Survey scores, which rank HCA among the UK's top degree providers, and in our Ofsted Outstanding rating.
